

Are You Doing What You “Really” Want To Do With Your Life?

by

Monica M. Burns

Many women in this world today work because it's necessary and they work in jobs that they really don't want. Some of them are single parents and they do what's necessary to take care of the kids and the house.

If you are a woman and working in a job that clearly makes you unhappy and depressed most of the time...it's time to leave. I know you are saying “but I have bills to pay.” And I did too! I have had and quit so many jobs in my life. If one didn't work, I moved on to another and another and another...and I am a single parent! You have to take risks if you want to finally discover what it is that you should really be doing with your life.

If you stay in that depressing and miserable job for too long, you will not ever leave. You'll see it as security for you even though you are sick and depressed while you are at work. And guess what.....that means you are sick most of the time! We spend most of our time and days at work. I refused to allow another person or job to have that type of control over me. I took control of my career and decided I was too smart anyway for the companies and people that hired me.

When the right time comes for you to discover what you really need to be doing with your life and you make the important decision to move away from that depressing job, take all that you have learned from that job and others and apply it to what you will discover soon enough, what you really will be doing with your life.
